Lanz Uy tops Faldo Series PH qualifier

Lanz Uy survived the spirited challenge of his rivals and ruled the ninth edition of the Faldo Series Philippines Championship at the Eagle Ridge Golf and Country Club Faldo course in Gen. Trias, Cavite.

Uy closed out with a 79 for a 240 total and beat Carlo Villaroman, Liam Cully and Diana Araneta for the top honors in the second leg of the record-breaking 2016-17 Faldo Series Asia campaign.

Uy was the only player in the field to break 80 twice in the 54-hole event that receives points for the R&A's World Amateur Golf Ranking.

Three shots off the pace being set by Araneta heading into the final round, Uy wiped out the deficit over the front nine, which he covered in one-over 37.

Thanks to hard-earned pars at No. 10 and No. 11, Uy then forged ahead.

Although Villaroman made up five shots on the leader over the final five holes to match Uy's 79, it was not quite enough and he had to settle for second place behind Uy in both the Boys' Under-18 category and in the overall standings.

Villaroman was left to rue two costly holes – the short third where he ran up a triple-bogey six and the 10th, at which he could only manage a double-bogey.

Like Uy and Villaroman, Cully signed off with a 79 but was edged out of second place on a countback.

Araneta topped the leaderboard in the Girls' Under-21 section to win a place in the 11th Faldo Series Asia Grand Final, to be hosted by Sir Nick Faldo at Laguna Lang Co in Danang, Vietnam, in March, 2017.

Joining Araneta and Uy to fly the flag for the Philippines will be Perry Josef Bucay [Boys' Under-16 champion] and Laia Barro [Girls' Under-16 champion].

Supported by The R&A and endorsed by the Asian Tour and the Asia Pacific Golf Confederation, the 2016-17 Faldo Series Asia campaign stretches over 11 months.

MIAMI (AP) — History is going to happen.

Either Toronto or Miami will become the 15th NBA team to win two Game 7s in the same postseason. The Raptors could go to the Eastern Conference finals for the first time. The Heat have a shot at being the first team ever to erase 3-2 deficits in consecutive playoff series.

And if that wasn't enough, LeBron James awaits the winner in the East finals.

The stage is set, the stakes are super-high. The final second-round game of this year's playoffs is Sunday afternoon in Toronto, where the Raptors and Heat will play Game 7 and finally decide their back-and-forth, black-and-blue series. The winner will join Golden State, Oklahoma City and Cleveland as the four teams left standing in the chase for the NBA championship.

"This is why we're in this business, to be pushed and tested and challenged," Miami coach Erik Spoelstra said Saturday. "There's no greater challenge than a Game 7."

The Heat, led by Dwyane Wade, fended off elimination Friday, going with a super-small lineup and beating the Raptors, 103-91, in Miami to force a winner-take-all game. Miami won a Game 7 in the first round, topping Charlotte at home. Toronto also successfully defended home-court in a first-round Game 7, and this series has gone just as that one against Indiana did – Raptors lose at home, win at home, win on the road, lose on the road, win at home, lose on the road.

They hope history repeats itself one more time Sunday.

"Game 7 in the first round was a little more tight," Raptors guard Kyle Lowry said. "This one Sunday will be

DWYANE WADE KYLE LOWRY

"Just go out there and hoop."

Every team and every year is different, but closeouts seem to never come easily for Toronto.

The Raptors are 2-6 all-time when they have a chance to eliminate an opponent, and lost a Game 7 at home two years ago to Brooklyn – a team that featured current Heat forward Joe Johnson.

Fil-Am finds ideal partner, cops title

By KRISTEL SATUMBAGA

Fil-American Ruben Gonzales finally savored the sweet taste of success as he and new partner Darian King of Barbados captured the doubles crown in the Abierto Internacional Varonil Pachuca held over the weekend in Pachuca, Mexico.

Gonzales and King, seeded third in the $10,000 International Tennis Federation (ITF) Futures tournament, survived two tiebreaks to complete a 6-7 (2), 7-6 (3), 10-4 win over Colombia's Jose Daniel Bendeck and Mexico's Alejandro Moreno Figueroa.

After winning their first four matches in contrasting fashions, Gonzales and King looked headed to a disappointing finish after being dominated by their rivals in the first tiebreak.

But the duo refused to blink and willed their way to force another tiebreak in the second set which, this time, they won easily.

It was Gonzales' first title in a long while, and he considered it as redemption after he and American partner Sekou Bangoura were beaten in the final of the Bakersfield Tennis Open in California, a $25,000 Futures tournament.

Gonzales is expected to stick with King as partner after the two dropped just two sets throughout the tournament.

Their victims were British duo Luke Bambridge and Farris Gosea, 7-6 (6), 7-6 (8); Bolivian's Alejandro Mendoza and Federico Zeballos, 4-6, 6-3, 10-2; and Chile's Marcelo Barrios Vera and Canada's Alejandro Tabilo, 6-4, 6-3.

For winning the event, Gonzales is expected to improve his ranking – he is currently ranked No. 529.
